Ken,
I just had to put in my 2 bits after spending about an hour rummaging through your incredibly entertaining and educational site. I, being a member of the Air Force myself, have often wondered if I could get into this "highly guarded" installation on the premise that I am "one of them". After all, every Air Force member should be allowed on an Air Force base, right? After only 5 years of service, I have been on just about every type of base you can think of.....training bases, missile bases, aircraft manufacturing bases, and idiotic places where the "higher ups" run the place like a damn concentration camp because it gives them something to do (such is the case here in Iceland). At any rate, I have been thinking about taking a little "excursion" to Nevada to see if I could get on site. After all, doesn't it make sense that if a legitimate Air Force member can't get on an Air Force base.....then something seriously wrong is happening???? Think on that one for a while boys and girls.

Thanks for your time, Ken, and keep the faith.

Jason
