Project Faultless was the site of a very large underground nuclear test, in 1968 as I recall. It was the only test conducted in the Central Nevada Test Facility, which is now public land. You can visit Ground Zero without restriction. There you will find a shallow crater and a concrete plug sticking out of the ground. There is no danger of radiation, since the

According to my Area 51 Viewer's Guide, the site is about 90 road miles from Rachel. From Warm Springs (Junction of 375 and US-6, go about 25 miles northeast to milepoint 76.5. A sign here says "Moore's Station." Follow this road 12.5 miles until you reach a stop sign. Keep going straight about 1.4 miles until the road ends at a perpendicular road. You are now very close to the site. Go right for a few hundred yards, then left at the first opportunity.

Cars can probably make it to within walking distance of the site, but be very careful about getting stuck in the sand.

Watch out for trolls!

Moore's Station, an abandoned ranch, is worth visiting while in the area. You would have got there by turning right at the stop sign mentioned above and going about 5 miles.
