Subject: Mysterious pissed off person at Nellis Air Show

Hi, like about 450,000 of my fellow earthlings(some might not have been?) my father and I went to the 50th anniversary of the Air Force Golden Air Tattoo Air Show at Nellis Air Force Base in April. We went both days to punish ourselves. This was the best air show I have ever been to I must say. We enjoyed watching the static and dynamic aircraft displays and all the people dropping like flies from the heat. Watching all the ambulances weaving through 100,000 people was pretty funny too. We witnessed a pretty strange event however. My dad and I were walking near the area where the missiles, bombs, Russian equipment, and Minuteman III launcher were near the hangers and overheard a conversation between a military and civilian guy. My dad said the military guy was a colonel but I had a hard time seeing the bars on his cammo outfit. The civilian was wearing pants, a polo shirt, and dark sunglasses. We heard the civilian yelling at the military person. He was saying how could you allow that booth to sell Area 51 and alien stuff on the base. He also said that the military guy better have a good explanation of why he allowed this or he would be in hot water. He also said if it happens again I will have you busted so low you will wish you were a million miles away from me. I then walked away and all I could see was them waiving their fingers at each other. We then went over to the booth and saw that almost the whole town of Rachel(not quite!, 5 people) was selling shirts, patches, hats, etc. there. We had to do our part to help them in their espionage operations. We bought some shirts and other trinkets to help fund their operations :-). We then left as our feet felt like they were gone from walking around 100 miles over two days. Does anyone think the civilian was an MJ-12 agent? He sure looked and acted sinister enough. Did anyone else see anything strange at the Air Show?

Scott (Their here, their hostile, and I don't want you to know)
(practicing MJ-12 agent)
