Campbell Kills Caminos on Freedom Ridge

Here's a bit of nostalgia from the Freedom Ridge days....

On the morning of Oct. 31, 1994, I and an aviation journalist visited Freedom Ridge. I had my scanner tuned to the Groom Lake tower frequency, and the journalist was recording it with a small tape recorder.

We never saw any secret aircraft, but we did have the satisfaction of preventing something secret from landing.

The following is a transcript of monitored Groom Lake Tower radio traffic, as close as the journalist could decipher it. We are mostly hearing only the tower side of the conversation, and there may be significant periods of silence between transmissions.

"Watchdog" is the code word indicating that watchers are on Freedom Ridge. The "Red and White" is a "Janet" 737 bringing workers to the base -- a routine flight. "Pyramid" is presumed to be a visual or radio waypoint.
