On the contrary, I get a lot of good information out of Boylan's many postings.

You may not agree with his interpretations but if you subtract them out and look at the underlying data he reports, he often comes up with some useful stuff.

I am fond of his 1992 report on his visit to Area 51. See it at http://www.ufomind.com/area51/articles/1992/mufon_9208.html. I disagree with his interpretations, but I think he saw what he claims he did.

Reading Boylan is like listening to Radio Moscow during the Cold War. If you subtract out the ideology (which every Moscovite learned to so), you might glean some nuggets of useful news.

I pay attention to each new Boylan posting because it usually tips me off to new links and web pages I should add to my site.
