LaViolette Article on B-2 "Anti-Gravity"

From: jiml@sover.net
Date: Thu, 9 Oct 1997 18:59:22 -0800

[The following] may help to shed some light on the current discussion regarding the B-2's anti-grav technology. I have not independently sought to verify any of the claims made by the author of this article, LaViolette; something you may want to do. It'd probably be pretty easy to look up back issues of AW&ST however to see what it had to say about the subject.

I snagged this from the old Skunk Works listserver, which I understand is back up and running on a new host these days.

All The Best,
Jim

[FROM THE MODERATOR: I assume this document has been pretty well
[talked out on the Skunk Works list, and we probably don't need to [repeat those discussions here. Does anyone have a pithy reply?
[Anyway, it does explain Boylan's B-2 story.

(partial post)

The Following is an essay by Paul A. LaViolette, Ph.D. It is also an excerpt from the book "Electrogravitics Systems: Reports on a New Propulsion Methodology" by Thomas Valone, M.A., P.E.

The U.S. Antigravity Squadron

by Paul A. LaViolette, Ph.D.

Abstract

Electrogravitic (antigravity) technology, under development in U.S. Air Force black R&D programs since late 1954, may now have been put to practical use in the B-2 Advanced Technology Bomber to provide an exotic auxiliary mode of propulsion. This inference is based on the recent disclosure that the B-2 charges both its wing leading edge and jet exhaust stream to a high voltage....

The remainder of this article was removed by the webmaster on 10/28/97, after LaViolette complained that its posting was "illegal by international copyright law." See Oct. 28 posting for the text of LaViolette's complaint and our response to it.
