From the Book Cover

Your ordinary house and garden plants -- the carrot you peel, the philodendron you water daily -- possess extraordinary powers. Here's the whole, wild, unbelievable, true story: plants that can feel emotions... diagnose diseases... act as lie detectors... read minds... plants with hitherto untapped powers of communication.

- A plant attached to a lie detector reacted violently when an expert thought about burning one of its leaves
- A philodendron, activated by a thought impulse from an electronics technician, started a car two-and-a-half miles away
- A chemist became so attuned to his house plants that they reacted excitedly when he made love to his girlfriend eighty miles away
- An electronics expert succeeded in eradicating insects by beaming insecticides not at the crops themselves, but at an ordinary photograph of the target field

Sound weird? Reviewers of this amazing book thought so too, at first. But as they read on, they became convinced. Said Harriet Van Horne, nationally syndicated columnist: "I began a skeptic, ended by crooning a lullaby to my philodendron and giving it the dregs of the dinner wine." And John White, in the San Francisco Chronicle, enthused: "One in a while you find a book that stuns you. Its scope leaves you breathless. This is such a book."
