5 titles below ($5.00 to $16.95) including (in alphabetical order): Ancient Micronesia & the Lost City of Nan Madol * Island of Pohnpei, North * Island of Pohnpei, South * Micronesia, Lonely Planet Guide

Pohnpei Island is best known for its remarkable ruins of Nan Madol, where huge basalt columns have been stacked like logs to form artificial islands and stone temples.

Since the island was under U.S. control following WWII, it has been mapped in detail by the USGS. The island is covered by two huge maps, one for the south, where Nan Madol is located, and one for the more populated north. These maps would be helpful if you are thinking of visiting the island or just want to know where the ruins are located.

ancmicro	Ancient Micronesia & the Lost City of Nan Madol (new trade paperback) By David Hatcher Childress. 1998, Adventures Unlimited, 200pp. "Including Palau, Kosrae, Yap, Chuuk, Pohnpei & Guam." B+W illustrations throughout. Childress travels to the South Pacific to report on mysteries there, with special focus on the ancient ruins of Nan Madol on Pohnpei Island. (New) "Intrepid adventurer and author David Hatcher Childress continues his world-wide search for lost cities and ancient mysteries by voyaging to Micronesia where he investigates a sunken city. Discover with David the incredible city of Nan Madol, built into the ocean over an 11-square-mile area of man-made islands and containing 250 million tons of basalt columns. Local legends insist that the giant blocks of magnetic, crystalline basalt were "magnetically levitated" into place by the islanders' mysterious ancestors. With an extensive collection of old drawings, photos and maps, this book brings alive the great empires of the ancient Pacific. Includes a 16-page color photo insert.
