Subject: Message from Philip Klass

Philip Klass, who has no internet connection or web site, has asked me to forward the following message to you regarding your page <http://www.psispy.com/people/k/klass/>, which I printed and mailed to him:

The reviewer of my book "UFO Abductions: A Dangerous Game" says the book is "without footnotes or an index." A four-page index begins on p. 220. I seldom use footnotes which I view as an interruptive distraction for a reader. I much prefer to include such reference material in the main text, as noted by the reviewer of my recent book, "The REAL Roswell Crashed Saucer Coverup."

Re: James Bond Johnson's reported objection to my new book on Roswell because I never interviewed him. The first Roswell researcher to talk with Johnson was Kevin Randle, who conducted a 40-minute telephone interview on Feb. 27, 1989, which he recorded with Johnson's permission. Later, at my request, Randle provided me with copies of this tape and his subsequent interviews with Johnson on Mar. 24, 1989, and May 28, 1990 -- as reported on p. 87 of my Roswell book. After listening to their content, there seemed no need for me to talk with Johnson to obtain his recollections of what had transpired in Gen. Ramey's office on July 8, 1947.

[The error in my review of "UFO Abductions" has now been fixed.
