From the Book Cover

In 1976 NASA's Viking Orbiters sent back images of what looked like huge artificial constructions from the Cydonia region of Mars. This startling possibility was ridiculed by many -- yet a group of dedicated scientists has delved deeper and deeper over the last twenty years. In November of 1997, six of this group, representing the SOciety for Planetary SETI Research, presented their data to NASA officials. The response: It is now official NASA policy to blanket the area in question with high resolution images during Mars Global Surveyor's mapping mission. Under the daring leadership of Administrator Dan Goldin, NASA stands poised to bring about the greatest scientific discovery in history.
