Our Review

Opinion of the webmaster, subject to debate

Results of a study in which nine "abductees" were subjected to a battery of standard psychological tests. The tests were conducted by a researcher who was not told that the subjects were abductees. The results given here do not prove or disprove their abduction claims; they only show that the subjects show no psychopathology. The report also shows the personality differences between the nine subjects and the general population. The results could be used as ammunition by both believers and skeptics.

The testing was conducted by Dr. Elizabeth Slater, who wrote the main report. Analysis is provided by the Bloecher, Clamar and Hopkins, with separate analysis by Ron Westrum. Bruce Maccabee provides an introduction. -- Glenn Campbell
