Publisher's Synopsis

Robert Monroe founded The Monroe Institute, which conducts research in human consciousness, out-of-body experiences, and travel through non-physical realms. In the early 1970's, Rosalind McKnight served as a test-subject for some of Monroe's most fascinating research sessions.

In "Cosmic Journeys", she tells of her initial sessions using Monroe's technology, as well as the history of the Institute and Monroe's research. McKnight relates a wealth of information about out-of-body experiences, communication with nonphysical entities, the nature of the energy body, and even what the future holds.
