Very High	High	High	High	Functional	Low	Wow!	Very High

Explanation of Ratings

Credibility = Very High: In general, this category is a rating of the author's intellectual discipline and the strength of his argument (which are very high), not the veracity of his claims (which could be false in spite of the strong argument).

Regarded as the best first-hand account of "remote viewing" -- otherwise known as clairvoyance. After a near-death experience in 1970, Joseph McMoneagle found himself with the ability to "see" other places and times. Later recruited into a military-sponsored program at the Stanford Research Institute, McMoneagle found that his gift could be applied in a systematic manner to any target anywhere. This is a down-to-earth book on what might seem a far out topic, but the scientific evidence is remarkable. Perhaps you, too, have a latent ability. The new "Revised Addition" contains an additional 11-page chapter on the Stargate program. (Interesting, but if you have the earlier addition, you probably don't need the new one.) For the history of government involvement with remote viewing see Remote Viewers. -- Glenn Campbell

From the Book Cover

Remote Viewing (RV) is the ability to correctly perceive and describe detailed information about a remote place, person, or thing--regardless of the normal boundaries of time and space. For over 25 years it has represented the cutting edge of research into the powers of the mind.

Joseph McMoneagle's near-death experience in 1970 began a chain of events which ultimately drew him into the Cognitive Science Lab at SRI-International. There he learned to control his talent for collecting information on remote targets through extra-sensory perception. The experience ultimately led to his early retirement as an army officer and established him as a consultant in parapsychology to various laboratories, agencies, corporations, and individuals.

Mind Trek provides us with insight into new perceptions and realities and gives us an understanding of how to deal with the doubts and fears of the RV learning process. By showing the effects research has had on the author as a subject, it points to consciousness as the ultimate time machine and the mind as a gateway to human creativity.
