Well spoken (written) Andy... I too manage several other listservs and have the same problems.... comes with the territory I guess. One of my main rules is to refrain from name calling, because that gets no one anywhere!

If you have a personal comment to make, make it off-line. If you have an observation about something, make it here. That's part of what we're here for!

I manage 3 listservs, and periodically members get testy (gee does that word come from Testosterone?). Civility and an atmosphere that encourages discussion are hallmarks of life in listserv-land.

Periodically I share two Web sites on my lists that were brought to my attention by people on my lists that help provide some rules of engagement for members of listservs.

Visit and learn:

<http://db.tidbits.com/getbits.acgi?tbart=05386>

<http://siec.k12.in.us/~west/slides/penpal/sld001.htm>

No one under any circumstances should anyone be made to feel that their opinions are not worth sharing. That does not encourage list lurkers to shed their cloak and become regular posters to the list.

The other option is to send your personal barbs off list to the individual and as we say in the bar: take it outside.

Please, I am not lecturing, I make my fair share of sarcastic jabs on and off list (though I am relatively new to Skunk-works) I just like the listserv environment, it has broadened my knowledge and enthusiasm for things I am interested in (planes).

So no one leave(!) because that leaves voids in the list's knowledge base, and let us remain civil toward each other.
