For Hungarian UFO enthusiasts, Roswell is another world

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) If the famous Roswell aliens were nothing but dummies in U.S. Air Force parachute tests, word hasn't reached Budapest yet.

In a cavernous sports and concert hall shrouded in semi-darkness, organizers on Saturday opened what they claim is one of the world's biggest exhibits on UFOs and extraterrestrials.

The Roswell story figures prominently in the displays, but visitors said they hadn't heard of the U.S. Air Force report in June that seeks to debunk the belief that the government covered up a UFO crash in 1947.

Even if nothing happened there, said Robert Szuecs, author of a book on Roswell, that doesn't prove there aren't any UFOs or aliens.

With admission of $3.75 for adults and $2 for kids, the exhibit is pricey by Hungarian standards the average worker here makes $300 a month.

One visitor, Istvan Demeter, was less than thrilled. "Let's just say this exhibition would not convince me," he said. But his 9-year-old son, Istvan, Jr., who clutched a souvenir Martian doll, was in awe.

"We're coming back tomorrow!" he declared. "No, we're not," his father answered.
