New Roswell Theory: Saucer Hit Weather Balloon

Subject: READ ON! I have a new perspective on Roswell

After reading the timeline of events over and over about what happened at Roswell, I can't understand why no one has come up with the following:

--There was a weather balloon being tested and the spacecraft ran into the weather balloon because it's navigational instruments were thrown off by the thunderstorm. It's quite possible the aliens were not prepared for flying through a thunderstorm nor had they ever experienced a thunderstorm where they originated from.

--Both reports of a weather balloon crash and a flying saucer crash are true. The government then set the coverup in motion by sending two men to recover pieces of the balloon crash and then staging a photo session. The balloon crash debris propaganda gave them the perfect coverup and enough time to get to the actual ufo crash site and recover the saucer and its occupants.

--The saucer had hit the balloon with such force that pieces of it were scattered over a large area that points to the area where the saucer was said to be found by witnesses.

I keep asking myself over and over why no one has thought of this explanation for the events that took place at Roswell. I do however believe the government was looking out for our interest by covering it up. The value of the scientific information that could be obtained is immeasurable and if used by the military could bring us world superiority in the weapons arena. Who knows what lengths another nation would go to get their hands on the secrets that might have been learned from a more technically advanced civilization.
