Subject: Re: Campbell, Lindemann & Rense: Government Contractors?

Being a former newspaper reporter, although not with any wire service such as the AP, UPI, or Reuters, among others, this story is hilarious for the mistakes in most wire service style books, not to mention several apparent factorial errors. What "intelligence" officer would ever admit such a program like that described ever existed and let his name be used. Someone in his position probably has a top secret or maybe even a "Q" clearance. Even if he left the Navy for a higher paying civilian job he still carries his clearance and what civilian defense contractor would want to hire someone making statements like this. Also I don't think Reuters puts ":Reuters News Service" on their stories, I think they just say Reuters after the dateline.

The last paragraph is a hoot. I doubt if Reuters would list a subject's wife and family and her hometown in a wire service story. I doubt if the Las Vegas Sun would even run such a paragraph. Sounds like something out of the Hooterville Times.

There is no question that the alleged "Reuters" story defaming Jeff Rense, Glenn Campbell and myself is a complete fabrication. It is not clear who created it, but its appearance on an ACC board does suggest possible culpability. This is a transgression not only against Rense, Campbell and Lindemann but also against Reuters -- who have substantially deeper pockets than the three individuals and undoubtedly will not be amused to learn that this fraudulent and libelous story has gone out in their name.

Perpetrators, beware. This will not go unanswered.

Subject: Bogus Reuters News Story
From: authority@webtv.net (Doc Barry)

A false story, supposedly a Reuters release is being circulated on the internet. This story originated on the ACC Images bulletin board, posted by someone named "Kitty".

The story is a smear against Glenn Campbell, Jeff Rense, and Michael Lindemann, accusing them of being contractors for government agencies.

A thorough search of Reuters dispatches will show that there is no such Reuters story. It is a false item.

This deliberate plant of false information, showing a bogus wire service heading, is a glaring example of disinformation and libel on the internet.

The three people libeled are among the most truthful reporters of UFO and government cover-up information found on the internet and radio dial.

Anyone who circulates such lies about people known for their integrity should be punished. == Doc

Can I be punished, too? PLEASE punish me. I like being defamed. My integrity deserves to be ravished. Oooo, yeah, baby! Give me more, more... Don't stop, please don't stop.
