Supreme Court rejects Groom Lake appeal

As reported today in the Las Vegas newspapers, the U.S. Supreme Court has declined to hear the appeal of the Groom Lake workers who claim hazardous waste exposure. This is effectively the end of their case.

High court keeps Groom Lake secret

Workers from the military base known as Area 51 are not entitled to know about hazardous materials there.

By Keith Rogers, Review-Journal

The U.S. Supreme Court on Monday turned away an appeal by workers at the Air Force's classified Groom Lake base -- known as Area 51 -- who claimed they were exposed to toxic fumes from hazardous waste burned in open trenches.

The court's decision not to hear the case upholds a ruling in January by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco that the workers and widows are not entitled to learn what hazardous substances existed or how they were handled at the base, located near the dry Groom Lake bed 90 miles north of Las Vegas.

The court, without comment, let stand rulings in the government's favor despite claims by workers that toxic materials, including coatings used for radar-evading Stealth aircraft, were burned routinely in open trenches in violation of federal law.
