Link Rules

Notes

1. Your link will be added to the bottom of the page and will show up immediately (after you reload the page).

2. Our staff will be notified of the link and someone will look at it within a few days. We reserve the right to remove or modify the link. Our most important concern is that the link is "on-topic," with a substantial connection the page it is attached to. Our second concern is whether the link is truly useful to readers and contributes to the topic in question. We give no preference to any political position (i.e. believer vs. skeptic).

3. Please make sure you are attaching your link to the most appropriate page. Is the page "$DestTitle" the best place for this URL? Or is some other page more appropriate?

4. Do not use this the form to report page errors, like broken links, spelling errors, factual errors, etc. For that, please use our Webmaster Feedback Form. Also do not use it to attach comments to this page. For that, use Attached Comment Form. You should use the form only to add a URL permanently to this page. The short comment allowed here should only be used to describe what can be found at this destination and its relevancy to the page topic. Please keep your description emotionally neutral.

5. Your link title and comment should be as descriptive a possible. Try to make it clear to readers how this URL is useful.

6. Once added and reviewed, a link is normally permanent and may be seen by thousands of visitors. Therefore, please use care in composing your text. In general, we do not allow changes to these entries once they have been added to a page (except to correct a changed URL). Therefore, you should be careful to get it right the first time.

7. Review this page carefully before pressing the "Attach" botton. Once a link has been added, it cannot be added again.

8. In your comment or link title, please use Mixed Case text consistant with normal written English, not ALL UPPERCASE or all lowercase.

9. Eventually, we will provide mechanisms for correcting broken links. For now, though, only the webmaster can correct broken links. Use the Webmaster Feedback Form to tell us about them.

10. We encourage readers to search the web for links to add to this page. Try any of these search engines: MetaCrawler | Altavisa | Yahoo | Excite | Lycos | Infoseek | Webcrawler | WWW Virtual Library | EINet Galaxy | OpenText | Magellan | Yahoo Search Engines

11. Feel free to add documents already stored on the ufomind server (http://www.ufomind.com) as well as documents anywhere else on the web.

12. Please be selective. Each link added here should provide new information on "$DestTitle" that is not otherwise available. Do not add pages which simply recycle information from other sites. Links to uninteresting pages that do not offer anything substantial will be removed. If the value of a page is not immediately clear, use the comment line to explain what can be found there.

Print References

Print references and other references to items that are not on the internet are entered without a main url.

Enter all the publication information that is available.

A synopsis or review of the resource can be linked as "Source URL".

Source URL

The source URL in a link is a second supporting link in addition to the main one. It is used to provide information that might help locate this resource. You should enter a URL here only if it is really useful to the user.

- If the document linked in the main URL does not give you any way to get back to its parent (as in a photo, text file or poorly designed html document), give the parent URL here.

- If the item is a print reference and there is no main url for it, this URL can lead to a synopsis or further informaton on the document, but not the document itself. This can include a link to a place with ordering information on the document.

When displayed, this URL will activate whatever you have entered in the "Original Publication" field. If there is nothing there, the name used for the URL will be "Source".

Responses to the main link should not be entered in this field, but should instead be entered as "Supplemental Links".
