Subject: New mechanism to move fields from page to page

A new mechanism is now in place to quickly move link entries from one page to another or to move them around within a page. For now, only I can make these changes, but it takes me only a matter of seconds if you give me the right instructions.

To move a link entry, send me an email message in this form....

ACTION: Move
PAGE: <http://www.ufomind.com/ufo/topic/nazi/>
LINKNUM: 5
DEST: <http://www.ufomind.com/ufo/place/us/nm/roswell/>

In this case, you are asking me to move entry #5 on the "Nazi UFOs" page to the "Roswell Incident" page.

Here are commands you can use in the ACTION line....

Move = Copy and delete an entry from one page and insert it at the end of another.
-- DEST is the destination page. Entries are always added to end.

Copy = Copy an entry from one page and insert it at the end of another. (Same as Move but does not delete the original entry.)
-- LINKNUM is required. LINKNUM can be a parent or child entry: 5 or 5.4. If a parent is specified, all of its children are copied also.
-- DEST is the destination page. Entries are always added to end.

Kill = Delete entry entirely. Both file and link number are required.

Shift = Move the specified entry to a new location in the same page, shifting other entries down.
-- DEST field is a number....

8 = Inserts this entry immediately before entry #8 and shifts the rest up

8.0 = Inserts the entry as the last child to entry #8.

8.3 = Inserts this entry as a child of #8, immediately before entry #8.3, and shifts the rest up

Number = Renumber the entries on the entire page

LINKNUM is required for all of these commands. It can specify a parent or child entry (e.g. 5 or 5.4). If a parent is specified, all of its children are affected as well. (For example, if #5 is moved, so is #5.1, #5.2, #5.3, etc.)

Notes:

-- If you can't figure out these commands, just describe what you want to do in English, and I will translate.

-- The entry number is the small number inside the <> for each link entry.

-- Once I receive this request from you, I review it for content, then simply forward it to my server by email. My server knows what to do, and makes the change immediately.

-- All changes have to pass through me, since this is the only way I can moderate them. Once the email message is sent to the server, it is difficult to reverse. Someday, I may give our most trusted contributors the ability to send the server messages directly.
