- Review of Dr. Raymond Moody's retreat - At at the New Millennium Institute. Mention of psychomanteum in several paragraphs. - Event report <9/14/97 #1>
 "Research into the practices of the ancient Greeks revealed that for over 1,000 years such places known as psychomanteums, underground clay houses interconnected by tunnels, existed for the specific purposed of evoking visitations from deceased loved ones.... With the help of Raymond's delightful wife Cheryl we erected a sound-proof, dark chamber where we hung a mirror on the wall positioned above the head for gazing and placed a soft, dim light on the floor just behind a reclining chair. Before entering the psychomanteum, each participant spent the day in conversation with a partner recalling memories of the deceased loved one with whom the encounter was sought."

Response for Russ - Psychomanteum Construction

Hello Russ, I hope this message finds you well. I highly recommend your acquisition of "Reunions", by Dr. Moody. This wonderful volume contains all the information you will need to construct your own psychomanteum. It also contains some valid advice on the "mindsets" you will need for this type of consciousness exploration. I, personally, suggest a room in your apartment that has NO windows. This will be of great benefit with respect to your having total lighting control. My e-mail address is included if you wish to contact me. I Send My Warmest Regards, Bob

Psychomanteum Construction and Use

I have information and photos for those interested in Psychomanteum construction on page 2 of my website:

Construction

How do I construct a small Psychomanteum in my small, efficiency apartment? I have mirrors, I have the lighting, I have tools and materials. I just can't find any instructions anywhere I look. I've heard the lighting should be obtuse and one should see nothing looking into the mirror(s), but that's it. Can anyone instruct me further? Thanks, Russ Eckerea
