Interestingly, you have not mentioned that in 1960 Basil van De Berg of S. Africa used the Adamski footprint symbols to build a working free energy model and in the last 20 years Professor Sieke of the Pro-Gravity Research Institute of Japan also has used the same footprint symbols towards successful research towards those ends.

In fact, he has published a very respected scientific journal to that account. But I'm sure your credentials and education must certainly surpass theirs. Did we mention the stone carvings found in the Brazilian jungle by Prof. Marcel Homet in 1957, and 5 years after Adamski's symbols, which date some 10,000 yrs old and where 80% identical to those same Adamski symbols ??

Certainly you are not aware of the European shoe manufacturer who put the shoes and symbol samples through every rigorous test and found them to be unlike anything found on this planet and published it. OOPPSS, I am sure that these, and numerous other actual facts have somehow managed to escaped your commentary. Convenient oversight???

By the way, I understand the pictures you so graciously copied are the copyrighted property of the Adamski Foundation and are protected against just such abuses. Something, I'm told, they have successfully defended in court.

By the way, none of the Adamski pictures have been proven to be anything other than actual photograph of UFOs. MGM studios tried and could not disprove them, The Pentagon and NASA could not, the engineer at Kodack Eastman could not SHALL I go on???

As a UFO researcher for 30 years, I would kindly offer some advice. Unbias reporting of information is the sign of a professional: one who acknowledges that they cannot know everything, especially concerning matters of UFO's or outer space. Opinions gathered second hand anyone can relate, as so many are trying to do today for profit or recognition... Actual experience is something quite another. And just think of how foolish one would look if that which they thought was'nt as it seemed, actually turned out to have merit. But again, that requires taking responsibility for ones statements and actions, which so many cower from when final accountability is required.
