Justice At Last

Federal Judge Susan Weber's dismissal of the Paula Jones case is a triumph for the President, long battered by the highly-publicized false and scurrilous charges. In her decision, Judge Weber, a Republican appointed by President Bush, characterized the Jones case as utterly without merit. Most legal commentators say that this decision also undermines Kenneth Starr's investigation-turned-witchhunt against the President as well.

Several lessons can be drawn from this dirty and failed campaign against Mr. Clinton. Greedy and scheming women making false and sensationalized claims of sexual misconduct against a prominent figure in an attempt to extort large cash settlements is a much more common occurrence than some of the public would like to believe. The use of such scheming women as pawns by cynical manipulative government power brokers behind the scenes is also a reality that the naive portion of the public needs to be aware of.

Judge Susan Weber's decision provides an opportunity for all those who posted disparaging remarks about the President's alleged behavior, based on the discredited lies of the Jones "case". Will those persons now have the integrity and decency to post a retraction of their hasty judgments? For now it is their behavior which is under judgment. Will they pass the test of common decency? Time will tell.
