"A statement from the University reinforced its dissociation from Brown's theories on UFOs and remote viewing. "Courtney Brown's comments about the Hale-Bopp comet are evidently based on his work at the Farsight Institute, which has no relationship with an d receives no support from Emory University. He has assured us that he has kept his activities at the Institute completely separate from his teaching at Emory." ¶ The University's statement also placed Emory in direct opposition to Brown's work with Farsight, saying, "The University completely disagrees with the content of Courtney Brown's non-Emory activities." ¶ University President William M. Chace, however, said he did not believe Brown bears any responsibility for the California suicides."

 "Several months ago, I restructured the Farsight® web site, and placed a prominent disclaimer at the top of each of the session pages, stating that the sessions were not done under proper controls, and that the data therein was suspect... I was told by Dr. Brown to replace that disclaimer with one that merely stated that we were retargeting things using more refined methods, but that we had not viewed anything contradictory to what we had presented. I felt, from a scientific standpoint, given the types of controls and checks that are standard procedure in both experimental and observational sciences, that this was misleading the public. I stated so, but as an employee, I had to follow the order."

Reader Comments Regarding "Courtney Brown" - Latest First

I Don't believe it (Brits will understand)

As a long standing follower of the UFO subject and someone who takes a great interest in other paranormal phenomena, I just find this book exasperating. It's intellectual credibility, it's extraordinary lack of sound fact or argument and it's obvious sensationalism make it one for the "don't waste your cash drawer". Courtney Brown must think we are either very gullible or very stupid.
