Prudence Calabrese Makes A Stratling Confession - "Former Farsight RVer Cites "Bad Science, Bad Judgment" (newsletter article; may be on-line eventually) - Zine article - By Michael Lindemann - Published: 2/16/98 - Source: CNI News [Vol. 3, No. 24] <2/18/98 #2>

"As reported in the January 4, 1998 edition of CNI News, Calabrese announced at the new year that she was parting company with Brown and Farsight and setting up her own organization called TransDimensional Systems. At the time, she stressed that her parting with Brown was amicable, but also noted that "we are aware of the limitations in rv, and are reexamining the principles upon which the current systems are based." On February 9, 1998, Calabrese posted to her own web site a frank admission of errors committed by herself and others at Farsight. Interested readers are directed to her website for the full text."

I am writing this to confess my sins: bad science and bad judgement. I will make no case to exonerate myself. As a person who is quite capable of making intelligent decisions, and as a person trained in the sciences, I am embarrassed at the way I have failed my friends, my fellow remote viewers, and my scientific upbringing.
