"A Saratoga psychologist agreed to surrender her license on Aug.10 after the California State Board of Psychology accused her of "being grossly negligent." The board filed a formal accusation against Edith Fiore, Ph.D., charging her with gross negligence for discussing her personal and romantic life during therapy sessions; not obtaining a signed consent for an unusual treatment procedure; imposing her own belief system on her patient, known only as "J.H."; and telling J.H. that past-life regression therapy would cure her."
