Regarding "Mars Pathfinder Alien & Conspiracy Claims" - Latest First

Why NASA should fake?

Why should NASA fake any of the photos? I don't see any reasons behind that. I don't think there's a problem in releasing any photos without any modifications.

-- Chan Komagan (koms@hotmail.com) 10/11/98 (#7)

Pathfinder Really is on Mars

The question is, will NASA reveal the UNTOUCHED photos to the public, instead of perpetuating their "snow job" on us all? Just take a look at <http://www.sun.com/mars/ops/rover.html>. They're trying to say that sol30s55.gif is just a different perspective of the stereo pair 13.gif and 14.gif! Excuse me, I was born at night, but not LAST night!

-- Rick Hukkanen (Ricker_h@ix.netcom.com) 8/5/97 (#6)

Why Fake It?

What motive would NASA have to FAKE an unmanned mission? I can see none, only another example of unfounded anti-government paranoia attributable to 2000 Madness! Even in Nevada, small plant life and other organisms exist in ample quantities to show in a wide-angle photo like those from Pathfinder. Pathfinder's work is valuable, don't cheapen it with paranoid delusions!

-- Alec Eiffel (pedro69@swbell.net) 8/3/97 (#5)

The pathfinder mission

This new mission to Mars will help us gain more knowledge about what the red planet really is. We would be able to find out if life really once existed on Mars. So I think this would be a great opportunity for all of us.
