Hello all,

I've been following the Rendlesham/Bentwaters discussion with interest. It seems that what with the collapse of all the big American cases, attention is now turning elsewhere. Well I'm afraid the following is probably only going to stir up the already murky waters some more, but this information is interesting and maybe important.

I'll state my position, so that it is clear. I think that something did take place at Rendlesham forest; it wasn't a lighthouse, it wasn't the fantasy of some stoned or tripping troops or MPs (though they may well have been stoned or tripping) and it wasn't the landing of an ET space craft.

Until a year ago I lived in Norwich, Norfolk, less than an hour's drive from the site in question, now disused. I got involved with the Norfolk UFO Society in 1995; being part of a grassroots group such as this is the best education into the colliding realities of UFO fact and mythology that anyone can get.

Two of the members with whom I was friends were doing a great deal of investigation into the Bentwaters/Rendlesham incident (BRI) and came up with some intriguing and startling information. I'm working from memory here, so I'll be talking in terms of "some" and "several" rather than details, but the general impression should get the point across.

This is what they uncovered: I make no claims as to its veracity, but it does fit and they did a lot of research, speaking to a number of people, including Larry Warren, who is almost certainly a liar.

First some info about the base:

It was a joint US/UK facility. It had the longest runway in West Europe. It was illegally storing nuclear weaponry, apparently in a large underground facility (no there weren't greys in it).

Whatever happened on the two or three nights in question, the base was prepared for it:
-- US Space Command were stationed there for several weeks beforehand, they specialise in the retrieval of objects from space.
-- Civilian shipping lanes off the coast were closed and made off limits for several days around the time of the incident.

It is likely that something was brought down from orbit, probably a Russian spy satellite, or perhaps a prototype vehicle of some sort. This may have been the same object as was involved in the Cash Landrum case in Texas, USA a day or two later.

Larry Warren:

The investigators met him, he toured them round the site, detailing what happened. He claimed that he had suffered serious radiation sickness and still did. He said his mother had the medical records. She knew nothing about it when contacted.

Consider Charles Halt:

He went from Rendlesham to command an ever larger, nuclear capable base in Germany.
If the Air Force didn't want him to be touring UFO conventions, telling the familiar UFO/alien story, then he wouldn't have been doing it. He certainly wouldn't have been promoted in such a manner.

My own suspicions are either that something was brought down, as outlined earlier, or there was some sort of nuclear accident, or near accident. Perhaps they were bringing in Cruise missiles illegally. The forest area where the landing was supposed to have happened was razed immediately afterwards, according to people who were there at the time.

So it would seem that something unusual did take place, but once again, the military are using the convenience of UFOs as a cover to keep the event obscured by a cloud of delusion.
