Subject: ACC's Transpacitor - The ultimate energy store?

Hello List,

Reading the article about the new device from ACC I was quite surprised about the properties of this device, as anyone would have been reading the article.

If this turns out to be not a hoax or some clever advertising campaign from ACC this is gonna shake the science tree quite a bit. And maybe much more.

Implications would be:

- super fast computers
- super power efficient computers, since no heat is generated
- super big memory available to programmers (Bill will love this)
- the ultimate energy storage device, no loss (finaly electric cars?)
- etc..

Does anyone knows where any official scientific information on the subject can be found (and not the ACC homepage)

Cheers and a Merry X-mas,

Hendrik Rademaker
