That is fantastic and welcome news. How about sharing this breakthrough of yours searching the archives and tell us in context exactly what you found and where? Of help would be which archive, the group number, what folder or box the breakthrough information you uncovered and the name and phone number of the archivist/archivists that assisted you in your discovery/discoveries?
As you apparently know, archives can be labyrinths and difficult to navigate for those scraps of information that so often remain dormant and unseen.

Again, my limited resources and skills have not turned up anything. But, since now we know that not only you have an extensive personal literature readily available to you and that you have apparently uncovered some earthshaking information through personally searching the archives, how about sharing your source documentation so that others can follow up and verify the above so that we can all put the thread to rest and go on to bigger things?

> > I haven't found any references in the literature for air support studies > >associated with the above, or for that matter any aerial photography.

> Sometimes literature isn't complete.

How true, but now that we have you and your research skills participating on this thread, you are in a position to really help finding out the truth about some of this matter and sharing your source documentation with us so that we can lay this phase of the conflict to bed once and for all. Please include the names and phone numbers of the archivers that helped you with your discoveries on these issues. Since I don't live near Washington, D.C. or Atlanta, my followups for copies of your discoveries will need to be handled by phone and mail. To do that I would need to know exactly what it is that the archives hold and be able to identify it by control group, box and folder at minimum. It would help immensely to have the name and phone number of any archivists that have assisted you in your discoveries.

Thank you very much for your participation, interest, research and willingness to share your documentation and research skills with the world.

It is very nice to come across folks that are part of the solution and not part of the problem. Anxiously awaiting the posting of your documentation.

Once more, my deepest thanks.
