It's been in circulation now for about a decade. Basically, it is a popular magazine on space exploration. Occasionally they will have pieces related to flying saucers. Recently, the May/June 96 issue, V. 9, N. 3, had a cover story "Flying Saucers - What's Under The Hood?" by Michael Warren. The story was about rocket scientists discussing ideas for space travel in the 21st Century.

At the time, the article also listed another www site called The Canonical List of Space Transport Methods where futuristic propulsion systems was discussed. That web site:

<http://www.qvsp.usra.edu/space/explprop/transport/>

Haven't visited the site recently, so I don't know if it is still active or not.
