Ed Stewart,

Then why did you ask me for the record group, box, folder, etc.???

>Wrong. I knew you had the references. What I didn't know was whether you

What alleged photos are you talking about? I have a video of footage that is reported to be from Trinity, first shows the fireball from the ground, the same footage that most everyone is familiar with. Then it shows aerial footage of the fireball pushing up thru the cloud cover.

>That you failed to provide in your response. You never address what this

In the previous message to you I mentioned that I looked for the whereabouts of Luis Alvarez at the time of the blast. What I found in that archive was his eyewitness testimony. He witnessed it from a plane. You see, I read in Lansing Lamont's book "Day of Trinity" that Alvarez was on a plane at the time. But the UFO experts were saying that there were no planes in the air. So I checked to see if I could find where he was, if not on a plane. The document says he WAS on a plane in the air and saw the top of the blast cloud.

>In other words, you have not seen this alleged footage of the blast >cloud. You are basing your claim without any verification that can be >attributed to real evidence.

But I have a copy of it on video already! What I wasn't sure was if it was Trinity or not. The Archive Technician said it was from my discription of it. The only way I could do better than that, is to purchase copies from the archives. They are quite expensive. However, the statement you made was that you weren't aware of planes in the air at the time of the blast. Please check the archives for the Luis Alvarez statement. You did kindly offer to verify that information.

>If you have actually checked and seen that this alleged footage is of the blast >cloud, reproduce it and post here for everyone to see. If not, admit >that you don't have a clue as to what you have been posturing about and >that your accountability and credibility are traits that you need >improvement on.

Does this mean that your offer to verify the information no longer stands?

I can't very well post the footage that I have here. I can post the eyewitness account if you would like, but it won't be the same as you verifying it with the archives yourself. But yes, I will admit that my accountability and credibility need improvement. Doesn't yours?

Regards,
Theresa
