Subject: Alfred's Odd Ode #79

Apology to MW #79 (For January 21, 1997)=20

A pox on the man who won't tell what he knows.
Disgrace, for his female equivocal.
Ruin an industry that profits from woe,
And escape our present predicament.

Hill and Billary, I saw them this morning --
Dancing all smiles and glows.
Locked in their circle of pride and neglect,
They spent too much bread and it shows.

We in America =96 we're wide, high, and mighty.
We drive in our cars =96 buy our cloths.
But we're living so well, at the cost of the many.
Dismissed with a short, "So it goes."

The alien view, as it's seen from the comet,
Is stripped of the reasons we use.
See advantage, position, and consumptive possessions
Restrict, and confine, and abuse.

It's respect that is making our misery worse.
It's gone, not forgotten, I'm thinking.
It's lost in the crush of the rush to consume
Slick cars, harsh tones, and beer drinking.

It's just the way some would have it --
Confused, uninformed, and benign.
Think they'd have best interest at heart?
But their gain is too great to be kind . . .

So a pox on the meter by which we're betrayed,
And kept in the dark, and kept stupid.
The ones with the answers will stand there exposed.
And they won't get their arrows from cupid.

Give up, answer man. . .give out, or give in, but give!

of my garbage can =96 seize ya later, gentle reader.=20

<And he did , too.>
