Bursting the Balloon

Subject: Bursting the Balloon

If anyone needs a good laugh they can goto this location to read the Air Force's dummy report: <http://www.af.mil/lib/roswell/>

What doesn't seem fair to me is that afters years of research some of the most respected ballon theorists like Karl Pflock, Robert Todd, Kal Korff and others that came up with theories and conclusions that were grounded in reality have been more or less pissed on by the Air Force's most current report which is clearly a fictionalized account of a still highly controversial incident. I'm speaking of people here that have done extensive research, know the data, and are aware of witness accounts unlike the Richard Weaver who appears to have forgotten what real research is. From what I have heard so far the only researcher to support the ballon theory that endorsed the Air Force's new story wholeheartedly was Phil Klass (surprise, surpise). I still have yet to hear whether some of the other ballon buffs think about the new Air Force report. I haven't seen a lot of back peddling nor have I seen cries of support.

How have some of the ballon theorists reacted to the report?

Jared.
