Mars Chasm Dwarfs Grand Canyon

Scientists say they have discovered a giant chasm on Mars nearly three times deeper than the Grand Canyon, as well as evidence that an ocean bigger than the Pacific may once have existed on the planet. The latest Martian findings come from the Mars Global Surveyor spacecraft, which began orbiting Mars last month in preparation for a 2 1/2-year mapping operation. Meanwhile, the scientist in charge of the Mars Pathfinder mission on the planet's surface, said he believed a communications problem with the craft could be overcome.

More information can be found at various NASA and NASA-related web and mirror web sites.
