Quotes of the Week

"To me death is not a fearful thing. It's living that's cursed.."
--Jim Jones, Jonestown, Guyana, 11/18/78

"It's funny the way most people love the dead. Once you are dead, you are made for life."
--Jimi Hendrix

Rant of the Week: "Koo-Koo Ka Choo, Mr. Roberson"

Every week we pick the wackiest, scariest, nastiest or funniest rant from the hundreds of letters received by us here at ParaScope headquarters, and present it to you as our Rant of the Week. This week, ostensibly in response to our article on Rev. Pat Robertson calling for the stoning of UFO enthusiasts, "Francis" writes to us, presuming we have a direct connection the mysterios "Mr. Roberson." Enjoy!

"Dear Mr. Roberson I think tyouy belong to a secret scoiety called the Trilatgeral Commission and you know where they ot their insignia from one of the ufo ailen federations aliances so maby you netter put youir self no. one on the hit list. Tell me Mr. Trilateralist just what did Yashua say to Peter when he wanted to call lightning down on those who didn't follow the Gosple If You knkow that then how and what dose that make you ? You call your self a christian well I call you a murderer and as John says no murder has the love of Yahveh in him"

[Reprinted with spelling and grammar goofs unchanged. Names changed to protect the ranters.]

Fifty Years of the CIA

September, 1947: the Central Intelligence Agency is born, tasked with conducting the covert programs of the United States. It's been a half-century since the CIA was formed in the wake of World War II and under the growing chill of the Cold War. In the years that followed, the CIA became notorious around the world, for assassination plots, subversion campaigns, mind control experiments and other hidden abuses But after five decades, what do America's citizens know about an agency that operates in unprecedented secrecy, often without oversight, and with a budget so large and poorly documented that no one knows how much money it spends? ParaScope has gathered together the most comprehensive collection of documents, reports and commentary ever assembled in cyberspace. Check out our exhaustive collection of exclusive material on the Central Intelligence agency and learn perhaps more than you care to know about the 50-year history of this mysterious organization.

Conspiracy Newsline: All the News That Doesn't Fit

If you're not paranoid by now, you must not be paying attention. Start paying attention and get your daily updates on everything that's out to get you, courtesy of Conspiracy Newsline.

MLK Assassination Update

The James Earl Ray case continues to evolve rapidly in the waning days of the accused assassin's life. An organ transplant specialist recently determined that Ray has six months to live, if Tennessee authorities do not allow him to have a liver transplant operation. The specialist also offered the first public explanation for Ray's cirrhosis of the liver: He contracted hepatitis C during a blood transfusion after he was stabbed 20 times by fellow inmates at Brushy Mountain prison. Meanwhile, Dexter King, son of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., has called for justice after a Tennessee appeals court puts a halt to Judge Brown's investigation of the civil rights leader's assassination. Get the latest facts in this rapidly developing case.

The Jonestown Genocide

When the stories of the Jonestown "mass suicides" first started filtering out of the jungles of Guyana, people were shocked and horrified that close to 1,000 people could take their own lives as part of a religious ritual. But is there another, more shocking story that holds the truth of what really happened? Robert Sterling explores the possibility that Jonestown was a secret lab for CIA experiments in mind control, and that a mass killing was the only way to cover up the horrific reality of what happened. The startling connections and stunning "coincidences" behind the Jonestown Genocide will forever change the way you view that shocking event!

Radio Mogadishu 2: Infowar Boogaloo

During Operation Restore Hope the United Nations made a pyrrhic attempt to restore "order" to the tumult in Somalia (and restore oil profits to four U.S. petroleum companies who had signed deals with Somali President Saide Barre before he was overthrown). In the middle of the operation, several bloody confrontations broke out after U.N. forces seized Radio Mogadishu, an incident which was examined at length in the DoD study "Information Warfare in Multilateral Peace Operations." Radio Mogadishu was ultimately an infowar skirmish, because Gen. Mohamed Aidid used the station to broadcast information that was critical of the U.N. operation. As far as the DoD was concerned, this criticism was unwarranted. But the Village Voice cast an entirely new light on the U.N.'s Somalia operation, when it printed photos in its June 24 edition showing atrocious brutality by U.N. "peacekeepers" against Somali citizens. One photo shows Belgian troops burning a Somali child over an open fire; another shows U.N. soldiers forcing a child to drink salt water, vomit and worms. So, were the Radio Mogadishu broadcasts really "unwarranted"? Were attacks by Aidid's troops truly "unprovoked"? ParaScope presents an update on the Radio Mogadishu skirmish, showing how this infowar engagement was re-enacted as if according to a script in Bosnia recently.

Stare Struck: Testing the Psychic Sensation of Being Watched

"You lookin' at me? You lookin' at ME?" Everyone has experienced that spooky feeling that you're being watched, but is it evidence of ESP? Wacky scientist Rupert Sheldrake, pioneer of the "morphic field" theory of metaphysical connections between all living things, has collected test data indicating that some people are correctly able to identify when an unseen observer is looking at them. Has Sheldrake uncovered evidence of a paranoid-friendly sixth sense, or do his experiments suffer from unscientific oversights? Enigma editor D. Trull sees if there's more to this phenomenon than meets the eye.

The Diana Conspiracy

Ne'er hath the world seen such a spontaneous frenzy of grieving as that which surrounds the death of Princess Diana. And as all good paranoids know, NO ONE dies by accident. Within hours of the news that Diana was dead, conspiracy theories began springing from the fertile ground moistened by the world's tears. After all, Dodi Fayed, who died with Lady Diana, is a cousin of Adnan Khashoggi, the CIA asset who helped Oliver North arrange covert arms sales to Iran. And word has it that Pont de l'Alma, site of Diana's death, was a pagan sacrificial site in pre-Christian times -- tying her death to a deep spectrum of weird occult "coincidences." Even Libyan leader Moamer Kadhafi threw out a conspiracy theory of his own: that British and French secret service agents arranged the "accident" to prevent Diana from "marrying an Arab." Do these allegations have any veracity? Or is it just a slightly more schizoid form of grieving? Is a Diana assassination conspiracy believable, or B.S.?
