What could not have been foreseen was how serendipity would step in to break this minor mystery. The local PBS station a few years ago decided to rerun the old TV series "The Outer Limits."

It was during the showing of the "Bellerro Shield" episode that I felt the uncanny frisson of deja vu. The eyes of the alien were unusually long and wrapped around the side of the face. It quickly hit me that these eyes were just like the wraparound eyes that were drawn in The Interrupted Journey and the later, more-detailed drawing the Hills did in collaboration with the artist David Baker. Though I couldn't articulate it at that instant, there were other similarities that contributed to the sense of a close relationship: no ears, no hair, no nose, and a cranium shaped like a bullet tilted backwards 45x.

I reread The Interrupted Journey. To my delight I discovered there was no mention of wraparound eyes in the earliest account. Betty's dreams, written down a matter of days after the UFO sighting, mention men with Jimmy Durante noses, dark or black hair and eyes, and a relaxed human appearance that she said was "not frightening." This is all quite different from the final product. The changes emerge in the hypnotic regression with the Hills's psychiatrist, Dr. Simon. The most salient issue was when the wraparound eyes were first described. That turned out to be during a hypnosis session involving Barney Hill dated February 22, 1964. Not only did "The Bellerro Shield" precede Barney's first mention of wraparound eyes, it did by only 12 days!

Jacque Vallee wrote an article regarding the Hill case for the Skeptical Inquirer. I have it in a book called 'The Hundredth Monkey'.

Vallee also cites the amazing coincidences between the Outer Limits episode and the descriptions of Betty and Barney Hill.

How could both Betty and Barney describe the same events, the same aliens? They both watched the same TV show 12 days before the hypnotherapy session.

On another note, found an article on the internet by a fellow who matched Betty's star map to the positions of the planets in our solar system. The positions of the planets are calculated for a date within one week of the Hill's experience and (according to the researcher) are a better match for the star map than Mrs. Fish's map. He suggests that the map shows the planets of our solar system, not distant stars, the two large spheres in the foreground of the Hill map represent Jupiter and Saturn. I'll attempt to find the link/article if anyone is interested.

Thanks,
M. Davis
