Regarding puncture marks behind the ear, I have never come across anything like that in a straight line in the cases I've worked on and read about. I might suggest that if you think you've had contact with them several times before to look for marks around the knees and elbows, fingers, toes, scoop mark on the back, white lines in any of these places that you were unaware of before and identify the source of. Repetitive contacts will result in more than one body mark.
