Peter,

Tim wrote the following:

>>In addition to this we have several declassified studies from the >>1950s stating that a flying saucer might form the basis of an >>interceptor aircraft based upon electrostatic propulsion. That >>was then and no doubt they had problems. What about now 40 years >>later given billions of dollars of secret funding and the >>opportunity for scientists to develop new technologies without >>the usual restraints?

>>I must conclude that given this information, which is but a >>any case, both types are for use WITHIN an atmosphere.

That is why I wrote my post: looked to me as an acute case of over-generalization. Some UFOs must be misinterpreted secret military aircrafts, but not ALL the UFOs. And I fail to see the soundness of taking a ride in the park with a multi-million $ gadget just to make tests in psychological warfare.

Please read Tim's post entirely.
