>Howdy Michael...

>Actually yes.

I would suggest that these creatures, beings, would also be extremely large if they evolved on a planet of that size. I think they could be possibly 25 -30 feet tall by our standards.

They would be able to perform almost "magical" feats of strength and agility on our planet.

As we have been told, the "small grey" beings which we are allegedly dealing with, would seem to have evolved in a planetary system of light gravity, with possibly little or no sunlight...possibly similar to what Venus appears to be.

Note that they are very rarely seen walking around in direct sunlight. I have heard reports where they were seen in daylight, but again they are rare.

Note also that the alleged abductees claim that the atmosphere and lighting conditions in the "craft" are cool. Fluorescent type light emitting from somewhere in the craft...Not hot light as our light bulbs produce.

I also am saying this hypothetically...I have no experience with these beings, so I am not an expert here, just opinionated. <g>

>One would assume that on a world with more than two or three >G's, an entity might be stocky and heavily muscled.

In fact, such creatures have been reported in South America, back in the late 50's to early 60's.

They were very short, stocky, and very hairy. They were reported in some instances to actually "attack" humans with whom they came in contact.

To quote from: 'Flying Saucer Occupants' 1967, by Coral and Jim Lorenzen, chapter six, page 103:

The first incident to come to our attention was in a report forwarded by Joseph Rolas of Caracas, Venezuela:

"At about 2 A.M. on the morning of November 28, Gustavo Gonzales and his helper, Jose' Ponce, set out from Caracas for Petare, a suburb, to pick up some produce, to be put on sale in the markets of Caracas the next morning. Upon entering a street leading to the warehouse area, they saw a luminous spherical object hovering about six feet off the ground, and blocking their way. They stopped the truck and Gonzales got out to investigate. A dwarfish-looking man-shaped thing about three feet tall, hairy, and with glowing eyes came toward Gonzales, who attempted to grab him. The little fellow struck Gonzales and sent him reeling about 15 feet. The little man then leaped at Gonzales, clawed hands extended. Gonzales drew his knife and made a stab at the creature, striking it in the shoulder, but the knife glanced off as though it had struck steel. Another of the little fellows emerged from a hatch in the side of the sphere, directed the light from what appeared to be a metallic tube at Gonzales, blinding him. At this point the creature with whom Gonzales had scuffled, leaped into the sphere and it took off swiftly and was lost to sight in seconds."

In one other incident from this book, on Page 104:

"On December 16, three young men were driving home from a dinner engagement in San Carlos, Venezuela. One of the men, Jesus Paz, asked the driver to stop by the road so that he could relieve himself. Shortly after he stepped off the side of the road, his friends heard him scream and, rushing to his aid, found Paz unconscious on the ground, and a short distance away a hairy-looking little man was running toward a flat, shiny object which hovered a few feet off the ground. The object rose from the ground with a deafening buzzing sound and disappeared into the sky.

Paz was rushed to the hospital by his friends where he was treated for several long, deep scratches on his right side and along his spine. Authorities who interviewed the men said that all three were badly frightened and that Paz was in a state of shock."

>Perhaps not. I do not know. I was hoping someone(s) has done >some thinking and/or research along these lines.

Well, I am not a scientist, therefore, my input may not be as well received, but the "thinking" part, I hope to have demonstrated. <g>

>However your opine is appreciated, thank you Sir.

Thanks. I appreciate you saying so....

>It would be nice to know as much as possible, about my hosts.

>Knowledge is power they say.

Your "Hosts???" Would you care to elaborate on the meaning of this? Useful knowledge is power...otherwise, it is just taking up space. <G>
