Well, not exactly so.

Corrado Malanga is not, and has never been, "director" of the Chemical Department of the University of Pisa. He is (has always been) just a "researcher" there. Anybody may check on the Pisa University website.

Shouldn't we add that he's been a UFO buff of the alien kind since he was a teenager (nothing bad in that: I've been, too), as well as a member of the council of the UFO organization Centro Ufologico Nazionale (CUN) since 1979 through 1998, when he chose to leave because his own "new age" ideas have become much too far out even for that group?

BTW, at that same time two other prominent members of the CUN council resigned together with him and have since promoted a new organization called International Federation for Advanced Studies ("a name, a guarantee"): Salvatore Marcelletti and Maurizio Baiata, who has been (and still is) the editor (as well as the publisher, 50% with Roberto Pinotti) of commercial CUN magazine, "Notiziario UFO" ; i.e. the same mag Adriano Forgione (who also resigned from CUN) is editor-in-chief of, BTW.

>Maurizio Baiata and myself wish that the analysis be conducted >most secretly and that even the laboratories would not know the >origin of the samples, neither what Wolf had told us.

You'd have us believe that you gave your pal Corrado Malanga those allegedly alien fragments without even telling him what it was and where they came from? Mmmmmh! Wasn't a report of your visit at Wolf's published in the magazine "Notiziario UFO"? Didn't it report you were given those fragments to analyze? Isn't Corrado the "scientific coordinator" for that same mag?

>Curiously enough, the results of the two different laboratories >reached us on the same day of Bill Hamilton's report.

The three of them the same day, independently from each other? that is X-Files-like synchronicity ("twice may be a coincidence, thrice is an enemy action": was it Goldfinger or James Bond who said that?).

>They are >opposed to Sims' results and match entirely with Wolf's >statements.

Bingo! You mean that now Corrado may add another medal to his collection: "tougher than Derril Sims"? Did he still need that?

Corrado Malanga is author of a book about an Italian abductee, where he (Malanga) has some very wild claims about what the motives and acts of alien invaders would be; but his most interesting discovery therein is the fact that you can easily tell whether an hypnotized abductee is telling truth or lie by giving him the command to raise either the right or the left arm.

He was also co-author (with his former friend, and present commercial partner, Roberto Pinotti of CUN fame) of another book where BVM (Beloved Virgin Mary) apparitions are credited to aliens, too. The most amusing chapter was when he mounted a complex comparison of a ring-shaped light-in-the-sky video-recorded in Crosia with the shape of Ken Arnold's first saucer (not to tell of the analogies in the dates of those two sightings), plus a reflection on the polygonal opening of the central hole, which was only due to the limits of the home computer he used to do picture "analysis" (not to mention that the ring-shape was just the effect of the movie camera internal reflections, as many subsequent cases all around the world have shown).

He's also been the oft-quoted source of claims that his chemical analysis of the ill-famed Santilli's "alien autopsy" film did confirm it was really dated 1947 (and Corrado was one of the very first to see it, going on public record to tell he thought those aliens were akin to birds, since an "egg" had been found inside SUE's belly).

And we're still waiting for his promised analyses showing the ET origin of some alien implants: yes, Virginia, once again "Italians do it better", and that may well answer that naive question by:

>Kathleen Andersen <KAnder6444@aol.com>
>Date: Fri, 26 Mar 1999 11:11:33 EST

>If Mr. Wolf had some samples of evidence that could possibly be >related to extraterrestrial craft/beings wouldn't it be the >logic to hand carry these items to someone "BIG". Like Sandia >Labs, Lawrence Livermore, I don't know, Boston University, Yale >which is less than 30 minutes from Hartford. Why would he send >it all the way to Italy and another one to Bill Hamilton.

No wonder Corrado might have confirmed any "ET" nature of any 0.0+% of anything: since 1984, he's been claiming the Ubatuba fragments were positively shown to contain non-terrestrial isotopes. Didn't you ever read that in the known literature about that case? You hadn't asked Malanga (whom also publicly said that J. Vallee had intentionally "lost" the only remaining Ubatuba sample).

In 1988 he refused accepting our (CISU's) conclusion that a given ground trace case was probably a hoax (we found the torches and the Public Health Office found oil traces in the ground), because the three burned circles were consistent with such famous reports as George Adamski's and he could find nothing relevant there (well, he arrived on place after the owner had irrigated the whole field).

A more detailed (yet largely incomplete) UFO curriculum of Corrado Malanga, should also include such gems as:

- "we now know exactly how aliens can pass through walls";
- the recent discovery of the new physics principles used by alien spacecrafts;

- his disdain for American abduction researchers, whose experience he claimed to have reached and surpassed;

- his lurid attack against Peter Sturrock because his "committee" chose to ignore precisely the "hard data" (crop circles, abductions, implants) showing "undoubtedly" UFOs are but alien spaceships; since Sturrock claimed there is no proof UFOs are precisely what Malanga firmly believe, Corrado's suggested a clear-cut out-aut: either Sturrock is a stupid or he is a member of the worldwide coverup. But Malanga's conclusion was unequivocally the second option: Sturrock acted in a hurry, fearing that the "real" UFO research by (guess it?) the Italians of CUN (that is: Malanga) might have outed the "hoax" UFO research by Americans ufologists and lead some hidden truths to public revelation. (It was published as such in Pinotti's and Baiata's "Notiziario UFO", september 1998 issue. But if you can't read Italian, you would lose more than half of the delight, which consists in his lyric prose.)

As you see, he's sort of "renaissance scientist", not only offering his chemical analyst abilities to ufology, but also posing as a expert in photo computer, hypnosis, physics, psychology and whatever you may need.

Anyway, he can hardly be regarded as an uncommitted, unbiased scientist examining (and confirming) alien evidence in a "double blind" laboratory test.

>Last August, Paola Harris and myself visited doctor Wolf in his >flat in Connecticut and spent two days with him, having the

I feel confident that you did "verify his degrees and credentials" with a greater accuracy than Malanga's ones.

Just for the record.

Best regards
