Next Opportunity for MGS to Image the "Face on Mars"
 on August 27

August 25, 1999

Editor:
 Paul Anderson
 Director
 The Millennium Project

The next opportunity for the Mars Global Surveyor to take new images of the controversial "Face on Mars" and other objects in the Cydonia region of Mars, with unparalleled resolution, takes place on August 27, 1999. After that, the next time is not until November. Now is the crucial time to pressure NASA to keep to its publicized commitment to continue to take new images until the matter is settled (or will it ever be?). TMP considers this to be a very important issue, which NASA has neglected for far too long now.
