Subject: Firmage a Floppie?

FIRMAGE A FLOPPIE?

The January 2000 issue of PC Computing magazine features its annual Floppie Awards which "celebrate the most bizarre, most annoying, dumbest, sleaziest, and least necessary things that happened in 1999." Listed among the 'Floppies' for 1999 is one Joe Firmage.

Many will recall Firmage's explosion onto the UFO scene last year. Firmage resigned as CEO of USWeb to pursue his belief that extraterrestrials were present on Earth and that many computer and other technological advances were back-engineered from alien technology. Many dubbed Firmage "The Fox Mulder of Silicon Valley" for his beliefs.

The piece on Firmage in PC Magazine reads:

"That was no alien, Joe! It was Lou Dobbs, after your CEO job. Internet entrepreneur Joe Firmage in January quit his job as CEO of Internet marketing company USWeb/CKS to spread his belief that many of today's technologies, such as lasers, came from extraterrestrial aliens - one of whom visited him at home."

Firmage has been at the end of many jabs from the majority of the mainstream media who do not take the 28 year old computer wizard very seriously. Firmage has been very active on the UFO scene funding many projects and is also rumored to be meeting with many top politicians concerning UFOs.
