>In 1992, two Southampton men, Doug Bower and Dave Chorley, >confessed to making corn circles: every summer night for 20 >years. Their method was simple: rakes and planks of wood to >bash down the crop, ropes to guide them to a perfect circle, >loops of wire on hats to guide straight lines.

Just to take-off on a different thread. Does anyone here believe that these two people actually ever made a single crop circle? Not only have they failed to make one with anyone watching, but they claim to have made perfect straight lines with a loop of wire attached to the brim of a baseball hat. Now think about it, that wouldn't actually work.

John.
