There are a whole bunch different of ways to go with this -- and as one of the "satirists" it would be unseemly for me to vent too much black bile <g>(and besides, I'm of the mind that the occasional grippl-bust is just what the good doctor ordered); however, "I gots to say sumpin'"

This field needs the satire, Mr. Randle. It needs the satire every bit as much as it needs your tireless efforts and boundless courage. It needs it to be used as a lens to explore the humor of conscience. It needs it to humanize and make assessable to a lower, yes lower common denominator, the very real people you expect to support your much needed investigation. It needs it to interest people generally excluded by the hard to qualify and quantify details of your very crucial work. All work and no play (and it's not really play at all, is it?), makes Jack a dull boy. Finally, don't suggest we do to ufology what the government did to the space program -- make it boring. Satire is a way to open up the scope and view, chase demons breathing on all of us, and give our endeavors a little more depth of field.

Perhaps -- In the same manner you find my identified Odes easily deleteable, Jim could call his contributions "Gripes from the Gripple Works" "Gesundt's Hights" or even "Wine Before It's Time" -- then you could delete them as quickly as you can any of my tedious contributions. But I think you would be making a mistake, missing something, and needlessly limiting your ufological length and breadth.

C'mon Major -- lighten up <g>. Have a little gravy on yer mashed potatoes! It's made with Grandma's goose grain "Garden Gripple," blended from the best of what can be scared up at the time <g>.
